Overview

Nurse.com is one of the topmost Medical education portals for students who want to continue their education in caregiving. The platform is a repository of educational products that are state and federally approved continuing education courses.

Business Challenge

The client expected a scalable, secure and fast website. With the growing crowd, the page load time and query processing time of the website were compromised. The aim of the client was to grow customer base while regular updating of the website with new study material regularly so as to pull more traffic (SEO Efficient ) and of course manage each student account individually.

How we helped

Our team thoroughly analyzed the requirements of the client to bring about the most optimized solution. With the special tools and skill sets our team managed to reduce web page load time which resulted in much faster page loads throughout each site.

Accordingly, the Database was made agile enough so as to bring about smooth transaction and retrieval of data. We made sure that with the growing visitors the performance of the website is not hindered.

Overall, we helped to solve their issues with slow page loads, without slowing down the sites or crashing the server. We also solved their bloated database issues that were impacting performance.
